USE AND CARE OF THE UNITED STATE FLAG

The first requirement for flying the American Flag is that it be flown with respect. Fly it only in good weather from sunrise to sunset and at full staff. If displayed at night, it should be lit. Fly the Flag at half-staff according to official decrees and until noon on Memorial Day. Flags fixed to a pole should have two black ribbons about the length from top to bottom stripes affixed to the pole

Never let the Flag touch anything beneath it such as the ground, floor, water or merchandise. When flown with other Flags, it should appear prominently above them. Never display the Flag with the union down except as a signal of extreme distress or danger. The Flag should never be festooned, drawn back, nor up in folds, but always allowed to fall free.

Flags should be stored folded or rolled neatly and kept clean and dry.

The VFW will replace or properly dispose of the old Flag if it becomes dirty, worn or tattered.
